AMIA Academic Forum Purpose, Policies and Procedures

Academic Forum Mission

The mission of the AMIA Academic Forum is to foster the development, growth and improvement of academic units that educate students and conduct research in the discipline of biomedical and health informatics. The Forum provides a vehicle for academic units dedicated to biomedical and health informatics to interact, consider, and act jointly on issues important to them. This can include collecting data from individual units, recommending best practices related to education, scholarship, faculty development, faculty retention, and advocating within and in collaboration with AMIA for the interests of Forum members. The Forum provides a venue that facilitates collaboration among different academic units to further their objectives for education and research.

Context

Academic units in biomedical and health informatics currently exist in many forms. There are major differences with respect to:

- Scope: Some limit themselves to informatics as applied to specific aspects of health or health care, whereas some include the entire spectrum of health care; some emphasize foundational scientific principles, and some emphasize more pragmatic work;
- Composition: Some draw on faculty members from a variety of primary departments, whereas others have a core group of faculty members who identify primarily with the academic unit;
- Administrative placement: Some units are longstanding departments or centers, whereas others are emerging within their organizational enterprise.
- Academicians in biomedical and health informatics are similarly diverse group, with differences in their formal training, scholarly activities, and expectations for teaching, for research, and for clinical and institutional service.

There is wide variation in requirements for appointment and promotion of faculty, in faculty compensation, and in institutional support for scholarship. The character of academic work in informatics appears to often be dependent on particular institutional idiosyncrasies, rather than on articulated policies and goals of the academic units or on recognized professional standards.

As biomedical and health informatics becomes a sustained component of the research and education missions of organizations including universities and academic medical centers, and as informatics becomes a core component of new federal initiatives in health care and health related research, it will become increasingly important for associated academic units to articulate standards and policies for education and scholarship. At the same time, the larger organizations in which these units are embedded will need to develop an enhanced understanding of the nature of academic work in informatics, and of the support that these units and their associated faculty members require to be successful.
Goals

- The Forum will provide leadership to promote biomedical and health informatics as a well-recognized academic discipline;
- The Academic Forum will provide guidance and assist with efforts to develop, sustain and enhance educational and scholarly activities in biomedical and health informatics, in and amongst its member units.
- The Academic Forum will identify and communicate to its member units information on opportunities for professional development, conferences and workshops, and other relevant academic activities.

A. Membership and Representation

For the purposes of this document a unit is defined as an organizational grouping that has direct administrative responsibility for and directly supports at least one educational program leading to a degree or certificate or provides postdoctoral training. Examples of units include but are not limited to schools, colleges, programs, departments, divisions, centers, institutes and fellowship programs.

The Academic Forum membership is composed of units with a strong interest in academic biomedical and health informatics. Units that wish to join the Academic Forum will self-declare for membership by contacting the AMIA staff and providing brief documentation of their qualifications. The Academic Forum Executive Committee reviews applicant units’ credentials and approves membership as per the Academic Forum By-laws. Units designate up to two Designated Representatives. Designated Representatives must be regular AMIA members in good standing.

The Academic Forum has four categories of membership:

Full Program Member:
A unit with one of the following:
- An academic unit of an educational organization that is offering an educational program leading to one or more degrees or certificates in a biomedical and health informatics area or
- A unit of an organization that offers a fellowship or residency training program in a biomedical and/or health informatics field or
- A unit of an organization that provides post-doctoral training as a component of its research activities.
- Different units from the same umbrella organization (e.g. a University) that offer a different degree, certificate or training program are eligible for separate and distinct full memberships.

Emerging Program Member:
- Units that are intending to become one of the types of units listed under full membership.
- Emerging program membership is limited to two consecutive years.
- The criteria of an Emerging Program will be determined by the Executive Committee, reviewed from time-to-time, and posted on the Academic Forum website.

Affiliate Member:
- Units that have an interest in the goals of the Academic Forum but do not necessarily provide educational programs or engage in research activities, e.g., accreditation bodies, foundations, and government agencies.
Community Member:
- Communities provide an organizational framework within the Academic Forum Designated Representatives and other AMIA individual members to affiliate amongst specialized areas within education, research, training, administration, and practice. The unit of membership is a program.
- Academic Forum Full Member Programs can affiliate with an Academic Forum Community at no additional charge as follows:
  - Membership in a Community shall be coordinated with the Community leadership and the Designated Representatives from Full Members.
  - A Community shall have no more than two community appointees per Full Member Program.

  - A Community appointee may or may not be an Academic Forum designated representative.
- General AMIA members (e.g., Non Designated Representatives) may also join a community provided the criteria and eligibility requirements defined by that community are met and the member is an AMIA member in good standing.
- Each Community will have one ex-officio seat on Academic Forum Executive Committee.
- The procedure for establishing a community is in Section K.
- Full Program, Emerging Program, Affiliate and Community Members all designate a primary representative to the Academic Forum who participates as a liaison between the member and the Academic Forum. These members may also appoint a secondary representative to act in lieu of the primary representative when necessary and to participate in all forum activities. All such Designated Representatives must be regular members of AMIA in good standing.
